Organic C₃I Gel Technology vs. Other Technologies

Feature	Organic C ₃ I Gel	Silicone Gel	Others (EVA & PU Foam)
Definition (touch/leak)	Natural skin touch oil based inert elastomers.	Inert & synthetic gelly based formulations with 4% chances of allergenicity & accidental leaks in long term use	Polymeric ethyl vinyl acetate foam material. Its touch is synthetic away from natural touch however don't leak, with time it loses its air compression capability (PU Foam)
Cushioning & Comfort	Far superior than Silicone Gel	Far superior than rubber based products	Less cushioning & comfort with limited shelf life
Elasticity/ Elastomerism	Extensive elasticity and elastomeric bounce back property	More Elastic than EVA or PU based products, with least elastomerism	EVA has more elasticity than PU Foam however lesser than counterparts, loss of bouncing back with use
Composition & Development	Organic oils mixed as per specified patented formulation, and finished products are developed by injection and moulding technologies for desired purpose at extremely higher temperature conditions.	Powder form is mixed with other reactants to develop a polymer of desired use and by suitable cast-fit technology, taken into various shapes.	Polymeric Sheets of EVA able to get into various forms through engineering aid is possible while PU Foam has air gaps which undergoes compression and decompression cycle
Combustion	Being elastomer it melts like a liquid with an invisible fume and nearly odorless. The burning gel has significant higher temperature due to phase change and should not be touched.	When silicone is burned in air or oxygen, it forms solid silica (silicon dioxide) as a white powder, char, and various gases. The readily dispersed powder is sometimes called silica fume	Ethyl Vinyl Acetate (EVA) – extremely toxic in nature while Poly Urethane (PU) Foam also produces polluted combustion air thus requires to be used cautiously

Note: Keep off sharp/pointed implements. Do not expose to heat or direct sunlight.

Instructions for Care

1. Keep it in cool place and wash it with any detergent based solution. Dip it in the solution for 10-15 minutes, remove the dirt with hand towel, wash it fresh running water.
2. Don't use sharp objects like scissors or pins etc.
3. Don't use perfumes, sprays especially those containing alcohol.
4. Dry the washed items under shade area.
